

Lecturer or Teaching Assistant Professor of Biology
Lander University

The Department of Biology at Lander University, a public comprehensive university in the Upstate region of South Carolina, comprises a cohesive and forward-thinking faculty who deliver an outcomes-based curriculum that has been carefully aligned with the goals of the AAAS Vision and Change initiative. This modern approach involves not only our major programs but also courses for non-majors as well. Our department seeks to hire a full-time, non-tenure-track position at the rank of lecturer or teaching assistant professor to begin August 2026.

Teaching responsibilities will be teaching lectures and labs for human anatomy and physiology I and II courses. The ideal candidate will share our passion for innovative teaching using high-impact practices. In addition to teaching, the candidate is expected to engage in service to the department, college, and university.

Salary commensurate with experience.

Contract period is nine months.

Normal teaching load is 15 contact hours each semester.

Minimum qualifications: Applicants must have at least a master's degree in the biological sciences and demonstrable aptitude for teaching biology at the college level. Excellent oral and written communication skills are essential.

Application letters should explicitly address the qualifications and desired aptitudes outlined above. Send application letter; curriculum vitae; statement of teaching philosophy; copies of undergraduate and graduate transcripts; and the names, addresses, e-mail addresses, and phone numbers of three references in Word or PDF format to:

Dr. Jennifer Yates, Dean, College of Science and Mathematics at jyates1@lander.edu.

Review of applications will begin immediately and continue until the position is filled. All final candidates are subject to successfully completing background requirements.
